

New Online Role - Online Content Writer

Ecosystem Restoration Camps is looking for a passionate and energetic individual to join the team as Online Content Creator. This is a part-time remote role and is an excellent opportunity to gain experience working for an NGO in the environmental sector.

As a Content Creator your main task will be to produce written communications such as blog articles, guest blogs and other types of online content to increase the awareness of Ecosystem Restoration Camps around the world. The goal is to reach and engage as many people as possible and inspire large audiences to join the movement.

You will do this together with a few other content writers and get guidance from our marketer. Topics you will write about may include sustainable lifestyle, individual action tips, permaculture, climate change news, green economy etc.

The job will involve:

- Brainstorming topics for engaging content to reach new audiences
- Help with creating and populating a content calendar
- Producing blog articles
- Making sure the articles are search engine friendly

Excellent writing skills in English are essential for this role, and you must be willing to dedicate a few hours per week to carry out these responsibilities. This voluntary role can be done from anywhere in the world, and there is a possibility for this to become a paid role as our financial situation becomes stronger.

If you are interested in this role, please contact communications@ecosystemrestorationcamps.org with your CV, a cover letter OR video explaining why you would make a perfect addition to our team and a sample of your writing by the 10th of October.
